City to Host Workshop on Creating Residential Parking Districts

~Interested districts will learn criteria and process for starting a district~

RICHMOND, Va. – As the city’s population continues to increase, more residents are inquiring about developing Residential Parking Districts. On Saturday, March 14 from 10 a.m. to noon, the Department of Public Works will host a workshop on creating Residential Parking Districts. The seminar will be held at DPW’s main office in suite 704 at City Hall.

In Residential Parking Districts neighborhood residents are able to purchase annual permits that allow parking in specific areas where they will not be ticketed or towed. Parking for others is restricted to certain times of day, giving local residents greater access to parking near their home.

There are several residential parking districts in the city, including neighborhoods such as the Fan, Carver, Randolph and South Mulberry districts. Each district also has guidelines for visitor passes, as well.

For additional information on the meeting, please call 804-646-5876.
